Racial Justice and Advocacy Team

First Baptist strives to be a church that welcomes people of every age, race, gender, economic reality and LGBTQ status. We believe that all people are created in the image of God; thus, all are welcomed to participate fully in the life of our church and can serve in leadership. With this value in mind and in response to the white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, VA and the more insidious problem of systemic racism, the Church Council has blessed the formation of a Racial Justice and Advocacy Team here at First Baptist. The team is still in the exploration phase, but we have begun meeting. Three objectives for our work have already emerged: education, relationship building and meaningful action. Within the church, we want to focus on education, so that as a congregation we can have a shared vocabulary and understanding around issues of racism and injustice. Already, Julie Walker and Misty Phillips have been teaching a class this fall during the small group hour on The Work of Racial Equality. New member Kim Moeller has spent the fall taking the class. Here is her reflection on what she has learned so far:

“In the Gospel, we learn that we are all made in God’s image: ‘There is no Greek or Jew, slave or free, male or female, for we are all one in Christ Jesus (Galatians 3:28).’ However, the world we live in remains divided - often by race - in the opportunities and experiences we each have in our daily lives. I believe discussions on white privilege, discrimination, and social justice are key to understanding our role as Christians in supporting all our brothers and sisters in Christ, and in celebrating both our similarities and differences. The small group led by Misty and Julie has fostered a safe space for this dialogue, and for activities that help visualize the personal and societal implications of race and privilege. We’ve examined the connotations that language about color contains, and we’ve read personal anecdotes clarifying the emotions behind navigating issues of race in church. I look forward to discussing ways that our small group, and First Baptist, can work toward a community of acceptance.”

You will be hearing more about the work of the Racial Justice and Advocacy Team in the coming months. I hope you will join this important conversation and work as we seek to live our faith together.

Carin McEntyre

Making Stars for Advent

Our Advent theme this year is “And None Shall be Afraid.” During the season our worship spaces will be filled with stars. In the coming weeks, you are invited to continue in the creation of stars by folding and cutting. Materials and instructions are available in the hallway, along with baskets in which to place your completed stars.

Sunday, November 12 is Commitment Sunday

“For all that has been thanks, for all that will be yes!” is our theme for commitment Sunday, November 12, and next year’s visioning process, which will engage the whole church in celebrating what we love about First Baptist and dreaming about what God is calling us to be and do in the future.

The theme comes from Dag Hammarskold who was the second United Nations Secretary-General, and a Nobel Peace Prize recipient. His words fit this time in our church life. The phrase “For all that has been” celebrates our memories and gives gratitude for God’s faithfulness through the years, so we say “Thanks.” The words “For all that will be” blesses all that we anticipate God will do among us and through us in the future, so we say “Yes!”

On commitment Sunday, which is also combined worship, we will meet at 9:15 in the Fellowship Hall. I will be sharing where I think we are as a church and talking about the visioning process. It takes all of us contributing financially to make the ministry and mission of First Baptist possible. In the coming weeks, you will be receiving a letter with a pledge card in the mail. Sit down with your family, look at your budget and your income, and consider what you might give to your church next year. If you have never given start small, if you need to. Then, consider how you might increase your giving a little bit each year. To those of you who have been giving faithfully for years, thank you. On commitment Sunday, you will be invited to bring forward your pledge cards, indicating how much you can commit toward the budget in 2018. It is a privilege to give and contribute to the work that God is doing at and through First Baptist.

Advent Wreath Workshop

Join us for an intergenerational Advent event on Sunday, November 26 at 10:15 am during the Small Group Hour. We will have all the supplies (a wreath form, greens, wire, candles, and some ribbon) for you to make an Advent wreath that you can use in your home! The wreath can become a centerpiece that calls you to enter into the hope, peace, joy and love found in God’s gift of Jesus. You will also receive a simple Advent devotional with a reflection for each week that will guide you through the season. There is a suggested donation of $20 per Advent Wreath. We will work while listening to Christmas Carols and enjoying hot apple cider. Please RSVP to the church office at churchinfo@fbc-columbia.org and let us know you plan to make a wreath.

The Children’s Ministry and Youth Ministry will be participating in the workshop in lieu of Small Group. They will be making personalized wreaths and participating in other advent activities.

The Vulnerability of Preaching

Preaching is an incredibly vulnerable act. I mean, shockingly vulnerable. I have spent much of my life in front of people. Beginning at two, I danced, I was in drama classes throughout elementary school, and to top it all off, I am an only child. I am used to being the center of attention, but this was different. Preaching was something no dance recital or seminary class could completely prepare me for. Sure, dance taught me how to smile through mistakes, to improvise, and to make eye contact with people. And seminary taught me how to read and interpret Scripture, the basics of preaching, and they did all they could to simulate the experience. But these experiences do not even come close to describing the surplus of emotions I felt standing in front of you. After worship on September 24, when I had preached for the first time at First Baptist, I walked away knowing a new form of vulnerability – a sacred, deeply communal one.

I learned that preaching isn't an isolated act, but one grounded in community. I think this was the biggest surprise to me. Unlike in seminary, I was no longer preaching for a grade. I did not attempt to impress my classmates and professors with my wealth of knowledge in sermon form. Rather, on September 24, I was part of the worship experience in a whole new way. Through shared stories about God, the scriptures, and God's kingdom we got to dream and worship together. Your smiles, laughter, and head nods shaped the space, reminded me of God's presence with us, and made the moment holy. You challenged my status-driven, over-achieving mind to dream bigger and to re-imagine the kingdom.

How beautiful it is that we can all learn alongside one another, to encourage one another, to be present with one another. If you would have asked me five years ago, and perhaps even one year ago, I would have told you that I doubt I would ever be invited into the pulpit. But you took a risk. You heard God's call and established a ministry few churches are doing. And because of that, I have experienced a part of my call I never thought possible. Thank you for allowing space for my vulnerability and for sharing that precious moment with me. May we continue to grow together in this beloved community.

Pastoral Resident,

Brittany McDonald-Mull

Give to American Baptist Churches- USA Mission Offering this November

This November our First Baptist family will have the opportunity to support the mission efforts of our American Baptist partners at home and around the world. This year our annual missions offering will support the much-needed disaster recovery efforts funded by the One Great Hour of Sharing ministry, as well as the ongoing work of ABC-USA missionaries around the world. Our hope is to give to those who are currently working to overcome tragedy and destruction, as well as those who will remain after the relief efforts are finished to carry on the good work of the Gospel. Contributions should be made out to First Baptist Church. Please be sure to put ABC Missions Offering in the memo line of your check and/or place it in one of the special missions offering envelopes. We hope you will give generously to support the work of the American Baptist Church throughout the world and take advantage of this unique opportunity.

Thank you,

Mark Thomas, Chair of the Serving Team

Fifth Anniversary MO vs. TN Bash

It's the fifth anniversary of welcoming Tennessean pastors into First Baptist, and of Mizzou joining the SEC. To celebrate, First Baptist is stepping up our tailgate game on November 11th when the Mizzou Tigers and the Tennessee Volunteers face off for what could be a Historic Battle on the Gridiron or, more likely, the Battle for the Basement. Our pre-game party will start two hours before kickoff in the Grasslands (about two blocks from the Stadium) at the home of Lili Vianello and John Shrum, 1005 Wayne Rd. Lili and John will provide a main course; tailgate attendees are encouraged to bring some sides and favorite beverages (we will be inside or out, depending on the weather). If you are planning on going to the game, be sure to stop by beforehand. If you aren't going but want to join the festivities, come on by. As you can imagine, parking is very limited on game day so if you plan on driving to the tailgate, we ask that you RSVP to Ed Rollins (rollins@fbc-columbia.org) so we can plan accordingly (carpooling is recommended). This will be a terrific time of fellowship and one-up-manship for fans and non-fans alike. So come join us Saturday, November 11th for some great fun even if you're not planning to attend the game. And as Nate McEntyre used to say, "GO TIGER VOLLS!"

Child Development Center
